POSTCARDS FROM ITALY

We're still dreaming of all the stunning launches and installations that shined during Milan Design Week—here are some standouts worth writing home about.

By Jesse Bratter

There was no shortage of inspiration during this year's Milan Design Week. From sustainability at the latest edition of Salone del Mobile to historical and contemporary juxtapositions at Alcovia and the satellite installations throughout the city, imaginations ran wild. And a few Miami-based designers took center stage: Bea Pernia and Art+Loom collaborated on an epic installation of furniture and rugs during Alcovia, and Moniomi teamed with Artemest to create an alfresco lounge during L'Appartamento. Read on to learn more about our favorite moments. ■

EICHHOLTZ The Dutch furnishings brand focused on the art of making with collections that celebrate an artisan's hand. Think weaving, hand-loomed, woodwork and milling travertine and marble. Meanwhile, back in the States, they were busy opening their first U.S. store, Eichholtz Gallery Miami, in the Miami Design District, where materiality and craftsmanship reign supreme. PAOLA LENTI For the occasion of Milan Design Week, Paola Lenti's Agio sofa, designed by Francesco Rota, donned Lambusa fabric, a soft velvet rendered in juicy jewel tones. Modular in form, the sofa features backrests that adjust in different directions for a dynamic seating experience. paolalenti.it

MOLTENI&C Herzog & de Meuron designed the architectural Porta Volta chair for Molteni&C with as much function as it did aesthetic beauty, comfort and craftsmanship. Available in various wood finishes and seat fabrics, its customization options are plenty. molteni.it
